King Arthur did exist.

Queen Guinevere also did exist.

At least 3 Roman generals continued their careers as ~~sold~~ comites and duces during the course of Eric's

This year brought great successes for both Gothic tribes, EULIC opened his Gallo-Spanish war to preempt the hostile coalition of Loire Alans, Burgundians, Franks, Suevi and Roman provincials from Spain. The AMAL Goths were equally successful in Pannonia. The Hunnic-Gothic incursion into Thrace took place. Following a tested strategy, the Roman defenders shut up the invaders in the highlight and cut them off from all supplies.

the emperor's decision has requested

After shutting up the Scythians and awaiting the Emperor's decision, the barbarians were to be supplied with food. To that end the Hunnic-Gothic division was to be divided into smaller, preferably homogeneous units, each unit to be overseen by a Roman detachment. The entire operation was supervised by ASPER's second-in-command, a high ranking Hunnic officer in Roman service. He called in the chiefs and stirred them up

ANTHEMIUS was planning that the Loire ALANS, the Burgundians, and Paulus with his Franks should attack EURIC'S Visigoths - the former "Aleric Troops" - while Spanish Suevi and Romans would begin an offensive against them in the Iberian peninsula. A formidable Roman-barbarian coalition directed against the Ostrogoths emerged in the Danubian again. The Swiss King Humbert visited the camp with the mission of the second

The Eastern emperor Leo sent a regular Roman Army to attack the rear of the Goths who were being engaged by the Gepids & Rugians. Leo thus deliberately opposed his general ASPAR to them.

A battle was fought at a river called BOLIA. This time the Ostrogoths were victorious. On hearing of the outcome, the approaching imperial army turned back; Leo I gave

On his return from Byzantium in 469/70
THEODORIC son of THIODMIR took over the portion of the kingdom which his uncle VALAMIR had ruled while his father succeeded VALAMIR in the kingship. In SINGIDONUM - BELGRADE in upper MOESIA, BABAL, King of the TISZA SARMATIANS, had extended his authority at the expense of Constantinople.

Theodoric crossed the Danube with 6,000 warriors from his third of the tribe, attacked the main SAR MATIAR force and defeated and killed BABA, afterwards survived.

The drone looked upon this as the beginning of his tragedy.
The drone kept singing for himself

The signs of demoralization among the Gothic victors were insignificant compared to what happened in the camp of the defeated. (4), the sons of the dead SCIRION king EDICA were marched off; HUNULF, the older of the two, entered service of the Eastern empire and the younger, ODOVACAR became a soldier in Italy. So many Heruli and Rugians, but also Thuringians, followed Odovacar that he was later

Winter
469/70

In winter of 469/70 TITIVD, MIR went to war against his Suevic neighbors who formed the core of the anti-Gothic coalition, HUNDMOND had had enough; he and his followers moved off upstream along the Danube to the west, the Suevic king HUNIMOND is probably identical with the chieftain HUNIMOND who attacked the city of PASSAU
The majority of the people remained
